

Canvas

- September is a blank canvas, full of potential – an empty space for new possibilities!
- For an artist, staring at a completely blank canvas can feel daunting, but it also gives opportunities to try out new ideas, to do things differently.
- Modern technology can reveal how even the most gifted artists rework their paintings, adding and removing elements until they've got them just right.
- Imagine painting your life on an enormous canvas, what choices, decisions and actions are you going to add? Is there anything you'd like to paint over or replace?
- The new school year can mean a fresh start, where you can build on what you learned last year, but also shape something new. What are you hoping to create this year? How can you connect with children and adults in new ways?
- What do you hope your canvas will look like by the end of the year?

'An artist does his most difficult work when he steps back from the blank canvas and thinks about what he is going to create.'
